Resources, Tools, and How-To's

Scalar: “Scalar is a free, open source authoring and publishing platform that’s designed to make it easy for authors to write long-form, born-digital scholarship online. Scalar enables users to assemble media from multiple sources and juxtapose them with their own writing in a variety of ways, with minimal technical expertise required.”

“Archival Technologies and Resources” via the Society of American Archivists: “[Here] you will find tools and resources for working with digital and digitized archival materials, including information on copyright and intellectual property, digital preservation and processes, and accessibility/findability. The tools listed aid in creating, working with, and promoting digital archival materials. The resources provide examples of digital archives as well as related literature pertinent to digital archives and the archival profession as a whole.”

Digital Tools for Archival Research by Michele Hardesty via Archive Journal: “What follows is my approach to researching in physical archives, in an era of networked collections and digital photography. It is idiosyncratic (I settled on it through trial and error) but also shares much in common with practices recommended by others—librarians, archivists, and researchers. This approach has worked well for me for several years now, though it may not work for everyone or for all kinds of research.”

DigiPress Commons: “The digital preservation community is small and under resourced. This means we have to work together if we want to make a real impact. This site aims to provide a gateway to all of the wonderful community-owned and community-oriented resources out there that are dedicated to digital preservation.”

“Using Archives: A Guide for the Inexperienced” via Archives Hub: “These pages are designed to help anyone who wants to find out more about finding and using archives in their research.”
